

Christine on fast track to success in business

CHRISTINE Gear, 45, chief executive GHS International

The first thing I do in the morning is ... make sure my head and my heart are in alignment. You get what you expect, so I make sure that my attitude is ready to expect great things every day.

The book/film/album that changed my life was ... made up of a great list of personal development materials by authors like John Maxwell, Jim Rohn, Joyce Meyer, and Jerry Clark.

My high school teachers called me ... Sunshine.

I financed my first investment by ... working part time at Woolworths as a checkout operator. Then my parents had me read The Richest Man in Babylon where I learnt the principles of wealth creation, which were very simple, but most find difficult to apply. Simply give 10 per cent to charity, keep 10 per cent for the future and use the rest to invest and pay your bills in that order.

I Did It My Way

I learnt most of my skills ... through the network marketing industry. It is an industry that has totally transformed our lives from very stable secure salary and wage earners, to people who enjoy living life to the full, totally financially free, and able to impact many thousands of lives globally.

The best investment I've made is ... in the future of others. Transformation is a priceless investment.

My preferred investment vehicle is ... real estate.

The hardest financial lesson I've learnt is ... not everyone operates out of integrity. There are sharks out there and, chances are, you will meet one but that doesn't mean you shouldn't stretch out into the unknown, just be aware.

I spend most of my pay cheque on ... investment in the future.

When choosing staff, I look for ... people with integrity, enthusiasm and people who have our DNA.

Success is measured by ... the commitment you have towards taking those positive steps along the journey, whether in the good times or in the bad.

MOVER and shaker ... Christine Gear has a keen eye for investing in the future.
